

Hanifl Centre, India's leading institution for outdoor education and environmental study is conducting a Wilderness First Responder (WFR) and Adult & Child Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) course in association with Aerie Backcountry Medicine of Missoula, USA.

While "First Aid" is at the core of the course, "Wilderness" is defined as being an hour away from definitive medical care, which makes it relevant to most rural as well as urban settings.

Course Description

Wilderness First Responder (WFR) course is designed for outdoor professionals and outdoor enthusiasts, preparing them to care of injuries and illness in remote, challenging environments. The course is fast-paced, challenging, hands-on and fun.

This internationally recognised Wilderness First Responder (WFR) course addresses injury and illness prevention, patient assessment, long-term patient management, improvised splint and litter construction, and environmental emergencies while stressing the thought processes unique to caring for patients in remote environments.

Our instructors are professional care providers with many years of outdoor leadership experience.
